5 Conversations to Try With Your Kid Tonight

Five minutes turns “I’m fine” into real connection.

How to use these 5 talks

Pick one. Wait for a relaxed, side-by-side moment — the car, the dinner table, bedtime — not the second they walk in the door. Ask the question, then say nothing and count to five. The first answer is never the real one; the good stuff comes after the pause. Your only job is to be curious, not to fix. Five minutes is plenty.

WEEK 1 • TODAY'S BIG FEELING

“What is one feeling you felt strongly today — and what color would it be?”

LISTEN FOR whether they can name an emotion beyond ‘good’ or ‘bad.’ The color gives shy kids a way in.

KEEP IT GOING “Where did you feel it in your body?” or “What happened right before it showed up?”

WEEK 9 • WHAT MAKES YOU LAUGH

“What is something that always makes you laugh?”

LISTEN FOR joy and connection — an easy, lighthearted way in that builds trust for the harder talks.

KEEP IT GOING “When did you last laugh that hard?”

WEEK 16 • THE RESET BUTTON

“If you had a button to reset a bad mood, what would be inside it?”

LISTEN FOR their own ideas for self-soothing — often wiser than ours.

KEEP IT GOING “Let’s actually build your real reset button.”

WEEK 24 • IN THEIR SHOES

“Imagine being the new kid today. How do you think they would feel?”

LISTEN FOR perspective-taking — the very root of empathy.

KEEP IT GOING “What is one thing you could do to help them?”

WEEK 34 • A REAL FRIEND

“What makes someone a really good friend?”

LISTEN FOR their friendship values — the bar they hold for others.

KEEP IT GOING “Are you that kind of friend too?”

You just got 5 of 52.

That was a taste. Little Talks gives you one ready-to-go conversation every week for a full year — each with the exact question, what to listen for, and how to keep them talking when they shut down. By week 52, your kid can name their feelings, calm themselves down, and stand up for others. No psychology degree, no prep, no awkward silences.
